The Denison-Hall Manufacturing Co.'s Electric Alarm Clock has a 12 inch Alarm Attachment that will ring for an hour or more, unless shut off at the watch. No alarm to wind—therefore no spring to break. Can be depended upon every time. Warranted to be accurate, to alarm at the hour it is set for, and before or after, and not to get out of order. Our guarantee means that your money will be refunded if it does not do what we claim for it.

The Alarm Clock is something new, having accurate pinions, and small pivots of spring tempered steel highly polished. These and other advantages unite to produce a high running clock. The Alarm being independent of the clock movement, it being a more accurate time-keeper than the ordinary Alarm Clock. There is no jarring of the movement, no displacement of the regulator—a fault common to all Alarm Clocks generally. So little trouble to be set for use that it can be set at all hours of the day or night.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Singing Delegates on Their Way to the State Convention.

A large crowd of Decatur people was at the Union depot this afternoon when the special train on the Illinois Central railroad, bearing delegates to the state convention of the Illinois Sabbath School Association at Rockford, arrived promptly on schedule time, 12:40 o'clock. The train was one of five well filled yellow coaches, decorated with blue streamers bearing the date of the convention, May 23 to 28. It was in charge of William Reynolds, of Peoria, president of the International Association, and W. B. Jacobs, Statistical Secretary of the State Association. Each coach was comfortably filled, there being about 250 delegates on board on leaving Decatur. The train left Cairo at 1:50 a. m. to-day, and arrived at Centerville this morning in time for the free breakfast and reception tendered by the people of that city. The train stopped at Centerville one hour and a half. It stopped in Decatur 20 minutes, leaving on time, the delegates singing "Sweet Bye and Bye" as the train pulled out.

The original plan was to have regular Sunday-school services in each car, but the noise of the train prevented the satisfactory study of the Bible, and so everybody joined in singing gospel hymns.

Among the people on board, besides those mentioned in the personal column, were A. F. Hopkins, Macon county president; Geo. T. Tucker, county secretary; J. E. Saxton, Rev. Cunningham, John Sleeter, Macon county; Judge Easley and Mr. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. H. Harrison, of Williamson county; Dr. McCord, of Vandavia; Albert E. Fish, of Montgomery county; Capt. Longworth and wife, of McLeanboro; Rev. A. P. Stover and Rev. W. W. Weeden, of Taylorville; Rev. W. W. Morrison, of Paris; Rev. T. E. Spillman, of DuQuoin; Rev. J. H. Spillman, of Tunesia; H. Shumaker, of Nokomis; Miss Alice Miller, of Millersville; Harry McKay, of Paris; Miss Abbie H. Nebeker, of Champaign, and others.

Col. N. A. White provided dinner and lunch for the excursionists on their arrival at the depot, and all were accommodated. Many in the cars had baskets well filled with edibles and looked happy.

On the way to Rockford where the train will arrive to-night at 9:30, other coaches will be added, to accommodate the 600 delegates who will be on board.

Conductor James McHugh is the polite railway official in charge of the train, and the veteran engineer, Frank Pratt, controls the steam power.

The Contest Case.

This was the day set for the hearing of the election contest case in the county court from Blue Mound township, where in Bob Hill is plaintiff and E. R. Moffett is defendant. The gentlemen were rival candidates for supervisor at the April election, Moffett receiving 125 votes and Hill 124. Mr. Hill avers that an illegal vote was cast for Moffett. Since the case was instituted there have been two delays, and this forenoon Mr. Moffett came into court with an affidavit asking for a continuance of the case until the next term—alleging that Henry Kreidler who is absent and cannot be found is a material witness, and further that M. D. Smith, of Union county, Ind., is also a material witness, who will testify that Frank Lynch had voted illegally for Hill. The affidavit was read by W. C. Outten, and after looking it over Judge Nelson granted the petition for a continuance and set the trial for the June term of court, the counsel to agree upon the day of that term.

FIRE PROTECTION.

The fire commissioners presented a long report, stating that before the fire department can be said to be on an efficient basis, the Morgan street fire house must be completed and equipped with a chemical engine, hose wagon, hook and ladder truck with necessary harness, hose and fixtures. The increase in the force on account of these additions would be ten men and the estimated cost is $14,850. The estimated cost of the fire apparatus is $6,000. The board recommends that a hose wagon fully equipped be added without delay. The estimated expense of the department for the current year as at present organized with the expense of the addition recommended that officers of fire, fire and water inspector be consolidated. The report was referred to Fire committee.

Marshal Mason reported a total of 724 arrests during the past fiscal year; fines assessed, $3,030.00; fines collected, $2,096.00.

SALOON LICENSES.

John R. Dougherty asked for license to open a saloon at 1138 East Eldorado street. A remonstrance was read, as was also a petition that the license be granted. Ald. Simpson moved that the matter be laid over until next meeting, and got a second. Ald. Finn objected to further delay, as did also Ald. Scanlan, who thought that the attempt to postpone looked like an evasion of a question that might as well be settled now as at some future time. The Simpson vote was lost by a vote of 5 to 4, and license was granted by a vote of 5 to 4—Ald. Shoemaker, Finn, Foster, Scanlan and Whitel voting in the affirmative, and Ald. Ferguson, May, Park and Simpson voting in the negative. Applause in the lobby.

George Warren got his license at 134 North Franklin street, by the same vote.

Peter Sells asked for license to open a saloon on South Park street. A numerous signed remonstrance was read and filed. License was refused by a vote of 5 to 4, Ald. Scanlan voting with Ferguson, May, Park and Simpson in the negative.

D. & W. at the Jasper street crossing. Adopted.

The ordinance for paving East Eldorado street, 40 feet wide, with brick, from the Illinois Central road to Jasper street, was adopted, Ald. Finn voting any. The commissioners will report an estimate of the cost.

NEW HALL ACTION.

J. R. Miller's Proposition—Committee Appointed to Formulate a Plan.

An informal meeting of a number of leading merchants and public-spirited citizens was held at the Decatur Club rooms yesterday afternoon to have a conference and set the ball rolling toward the early erection of a large public building to take the place of the tabernacle, the loss of which is felt on all sides. Among the gentlemen present were Jason Rogers, W. H. Linn, T. T. Roberts, L. Burrows, K. H. Roby, D. H. Conklin, C. M. Imboden, James Millikin, L. L. Burrows, W. C. Johns, W. T. Wells, O. E. Curtis, J. C. Lake, V. H. Parke, C. P. Thatcher, F. W. Haines, J. R. Miller, J. M. Ciokey, D. C. Shockley, Jerome Anderson, Isaac Shellbarger and H. Mueller. The meeting was called to order by L. L. Burrows, at whose suggestion Senator Johns was chosen chairman, John Young secretary. The chairman stated the object of the gathering to be an informal meeting for the purpose of considering the practicability and advisability of erecting a large building suitable for large and small gatherings for the general good and to advertise the city. Short talks were made by L. L. Burrows, Mr. Millikin, Mr. Lake and Mr. Roby, when the last named gentleman offered a motion that a committee of seven be appointed to take into consideration the practicability and manner of erecting a building such as is desired. The motion was adopted. Committee—K. H. Roby, J. R. Miller, D. C. Shockley, H. Mueller, J. C. Lake, V. H. Parke and C. P. Thatcher. The need of a large tabernacle or music hall building was admitted. Mr. Parke thought the building should be fully as large and better than the old tabernacle, and that it should be centrally located. Mr. Ciokey and Mr. Miller suggested that it be a big affair, a handsome structure, so that it would not fail to be a paying investment. Mr. Millikin suggested that he didn't think the ideas of the gentlemen should be become inflated in regard to the matter; that there would be no big money in the enterprise for any stock company or individual; that the old tabernacle didn't pay, and neither does any opera house in a city of this size. He would rather donate $250 outright for the building than take $500 in stock, for he would never get a dividend. He thought some man or a number of men should be encouraged in a substantial way in putting up a suitable, cheap structure on some good lot. Mr. Lake thought that a building to cost $10,000 to $15,000 would pay far interest on the investment. Mr. Haines' views coincided with those of Mr. Millikin; he added that a public hall such as suggested could not be used for an opera house to advantage—it either had to be an open house or a tabernacle. He gave some valuable suggestions to the committee. Mr. Miller finally made the proposition that he would put up a suitable building, at least 80x150 feet in size, if somebody would furnish him a lot, not as far away as Ross's bridge. This was at first considered as a joke, but Mr. Miller said he was in earnest, and added that he would donate the building to the city if it didn't fill the bill. The committee will consider this good proposition. Who will do as well? The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the committee. All interested in the enterprise—and who is not?—are invited to attend the next meeting.

"HOME COMFORT" FURNACES.

NO GAS, No Dust, Wrought Steel, Malleable Iron, Very Little Fuel, No Leaky Joints.

No one can say that the time was not ripe for a new furnace. The days of brittle, porous, cast iron furnaces are numbered. In every branch of manufacture cast iron is being driven out by wrought iron and steel. Every bridge that goes down in a wreck of lives and property is found to have cast iron members. Every bursting cannon which slays its friends rather than its enemies is made of cast iron. Every leaky furnace which poisons a household with its noisome gases is found to be made of the same cheap, unreliable material. Improved methods of manufacture have made steel and iron plate, of first quality, less expensive than cast iron formerly was, and it is plainly in accord with progress

GIVE THE BOYS ROOM.

Give the boys room to romp and riot. Give them a chance to grow strong and strong. He whose commands are "Sit still!" and "Be quiet!" is training the youngsters entirely wrong. Over-restraint is a system pernicious; Over-indulgence much evil has done; But boys are least apt to be good and vicious if given a season for innocent fun. Give the boys room to spread themselves over; Widen their horizon—broaden their scope; Tempt not the lad to become a wild rover. By an endeavor to tighten the rope, Manhood will soon put an end to their folly. Sorrow and grief will embitter their cup; Youth is the time to be carefree and jolly; Give the boys room, and a chance to grow up. Birds from their nests in the wildwood are flying. Hither and thither—a rapacious throng; Eagerly, gladly they plume their wings; And higher extending their flight and their song. Out the fields—and nature's dominions—Gaining an insight to wonderful things. Free as the birds on aerial pinions, Give the boys room to develop their wings. Stunt not their growth by tyrannical notions; Patiently bear with their mirth and their noise; Let them give vent to their joyous emotions, Always remembering that "boys will be boys." Give the boys room for their proper enjoyment; Give the boys room for expansion of thought; Give all their faculties fitting employment; Give the boys room to grow up as they ought. —Josephine Pollock, in N. Y. Ledger.

MARTY.

Of No Particular Use and Yet How She Was Missed.

They said she was absurdly commonplace; that she was one of the homeliest women they ever saw, or that the Lord ever made; that she had so few ideas it was a mystery how she managed to get on in the world when she had to go out in it to earn her living, because the world is full of sharpers, and she would trust any one; that, taken altogether, there was really no particular use for her in the world. Yet it was amazing how they could not get on without her. Under the circumstances, knowing her uselessness, it was strange that they must have her to do all the little household things when she was at home, and the keeping of the books while she had the time in the evenings, after a hard day's work. And it was remarkable, too, how she kept her good nature through it all. But that was Marty's strong point—her unflinching good nature.

It was "Marty, come here," or "Marty, go there," or "Marty, I want you," from her mother and father and sisters. Nobody could spin a word like Marty; nobody could smooth out the many wrinkles in the home machinery as Marty could; nobody could read the evening papers to her father as she did; nobody could—nobody wanted to do the menial and the menializing, and the planning for the cheapest and most appetizing table fare. That it took any brains to do this they did not seem to consider. That it might be a tiresome duty with her daily duties they took no thought. It was Marty; and Marty, somehow, was made for such things, she was good for nothing else.

They lived in the city, Marty's people did, and it is not the easiest thing in the world to live in a small salary in the city. They had a flat, a very cheap one they could get to accommodate their rather large family, and they had to pay considerable, even for that. Then it was a matter of some moment to feed such a family of growing young people, they must have nourishing food, and wanted plenty of it, which wasn't always easy to accomplish. And they must also be clothed. This last was, perhaps the hardest of all, for they seemed to have grown out of their dresses and their suits, and it wasn't easy either to make the clothes of one child do for the next in size, because each one wore his or her clothes until there was absolutely nothing left to wear. So she mended them and tried to keep things running so that the old girls and boys could have new things before the old wore out, so that the old could go to the younger children. It took a good deal of her time, and she had little enough time, but she was glad to do it, to do it in order to help her parents who had load enough on their shoulders without worrying about that.

In return for all this what did she get? Well, in return she expected and wished nothing. That she was doing any thing but her duty she did not think; and she would perhaps have been greatly surprised if she had been offered any thing for her loving work. To be sure she did get dreadfully tired of the whole thing sometimes, and wished she might throw it all aside and have the pleasant times some of the girls had; but this was only when she was unusually tired and had had a hard day. She wasn't at all perfect, and she never pretended to be; she went to church, and had a class in the Sunday school sometimes when the corps of teachers was low; but she had no thought of being other than most unsatisfactory person in the busy world.

And so things went on as things always will go on till the end of her life, and Marty was no nearer the wish of her heart than she was at the day of her birth. For Marty's great wish was to be loved and to know that she was loved, and it seemed that life was never to have this sweetness for her. Not that it made her unhappy at all, but it would have been such a comfort to have known some one cared for her and whether or not she came home or never she would be home.

It's a pretty tough thing—"to be life," her father said, and Marty fully believed it. Still, like all young people, she wished to live; and therein lies the mystery that has puzzled many a wise head since the days of Solomon.

And one day the mystery was solved for her.

She had had a particularly hard day and was going home pretty well tired out and rather cross. Every thing seemed to have gone wrong that day. She had made mistakes and been reprimanded by the head man and told that if the same thing ever again happened she must be prepared to find a new place. She was crying a trifle as she walked along; it sort of eased her mind and would help her to bathe and herself at home. Marty was always thinking of what they would say at home and planning to have all things go smoothly there. She was feeling sick, somehow, and not like herself. Her head ached and so did her back. Once she came near falling from faintness, and a horror came over her. What was the matter? She was not in the habit of feeling sick. She had been blessed with almost perfect health since she could remember.

As the feeling did not abate, but grew more and more severe, she stopped at a drug store and got a half dozen quinine pills. "I believe I am getting malaria," she said, laughing wearily to herself. "To think of my feeling sick."

But it wasn't malaria that had attacked Marty. She had never been even pretty, as the world judges beauty, and now the crowning stroke had fallen. Marty, the homeliest, most absurd of the large family, had the small-pox. "As though she had not been a bother and worry to us all her life, but that this should fall upon us. It is really too much to be borne," said her mother. "And I suppose all the others will catch it from her. As to her beauty, she never had any to mourn over, but Kate and Minnie ought to have made their fortunes by their faces, and now all will be ruined by this ridiculous girl."

That she could not help having taken the disease did not seem to occur to them. She had always been a bother, and the crowning wrong was done when she caught the disease. She was taken to the hospital at once, and the children thoroughly disinfect, but the anxious mother could not be satisfied that the darlings of her heart and life had not been grievously wronged by their eldest sister who should have thought enough of their welfare not to have taken the disease.

"But some people are always selfish," she added, and no one contradicted her. And Marty? The physician said she had been overworked and had not enough strength to rally from the shock to her system. Had she even ordinary strength she would have recovered, for she had the illness comparatively light; but she had no strength and she died.

She died as she had lived alone from all love or care save such as was given by the nurses; and they, busy as they were, found time often to sit with her and hold her hand, and she had a look of peace on her face, as if she could rest, for, they said, she was one of the most uncomplaining little bodies they had ever had, and had such a way of thanking you with her wide dark eyes that it was a pleasure to do any thing for her.

When they at home heard of her death they cried a little and said if it had only been any thing but the disease it was they would have gone to her burial, but they must not expose the others; and time went on and none of the others caught it, and all went on well.

But, some way, in spite of all this, there was a vacancy never filled, and a want so long felt that life grew harder than usual, and household matters did not glide so smoothly, and Marty was missed.

"I wouldn't have believed it," her mother said, one day. "She was such a homely, unattractive child. She did have a way of helping you along with whatever you were doing, and taking up little things that no one else would be likely to think of because they were so trivial; but I never dreamed that I would miss her so."

"Yes," her father said, "I always had a tender spot for Marty. She didn't seem to be of any particular service, and they thought that all girls should be of some special use; but I begin to think it is well for some women of the household to have no particular talent. Somebody has got to look after the homely things as well as the beautiful things of home, and Marty was the one who did this in our home. It doesn't seem like home without her. I always did think a good deal of her."

What a mockery it was! They cared for her when she was beyond all help for earthly things and let her starve when a few words would have sent her out to her work with such a light heart. But so the world goes on and will go on doubtless to the end of time, and hearts starve for the words they never hear, and the love is given after they have gone from us. It is the mystery of life. It can never be solved while life shall last. —J. K. Lindum, in Ladies' Home Journal.

In preparing the ground for a corn crop manure should be used plentifully. The corn manure does well on corn land, as the crop is a good feeder, sending its roots in every direction. In cultivating corn only the surface of the ground should be stirred, as the real benefit is derived by the loose earth serving as a protecting mulch. Grass, however, should be kept down from the start.

Mustard and cress are sown thickly in shallow flats in a warm place near the lights. They germinate in a few days, and when a week or ten days old should be cut clean off and eaten.
